PREFACE.

I have the greatest pleasure in acknowledging my obligations to my esteemed friend and late Rector, the Rev. William Winlaw, B.D., for his cordial permission to transcribe the Registers, and also to E. A. Fry, Esq., Walter E. Ledger, Esq., R. Garraway Rice, Esq., F.S.A., J. G. Bradford, Esq., and other gentlemen for valuable advice and direction during the progress of the transcription and printing.

F. CLAYTON.

INTRODUCTION.

THE PARISH.

Morden is situated ten miles south of London on the high road to Portsmouth. The adjoining Parishes are Merton, Mitcham, Sutton, Carshalton, and Cheam. It is a small parish, its area being, according to the Ordnance Survey, only 1,474 acres. The population is between seven and eight hundred. It is chiefly a residential and agricultural parish. Its name has undergone the usual mutations and appears at different times as Mordune, Murdon, Moredone, Moredon, Mordun, Mordon, and is now definitely settled Morden. If the generally accepted derivation of the name be correct—from A.B., Mawr, high, and A.S., Don, a hill—it could only have obtained the appellation, from the circumstance that the small eminence upon which the principal part of the village stands, is high in comparison with the low-lying land adjacent. I am, however, more inclined to the belief that the first syllable is merely a contraction of "Moor" for moorland, must certainly, in ancient times, have been the proper name of the low land alluded to above. In this case Morden would mean the Moor Hill. The earliest notice of the parish is found in the Will of Ethelstan the Etheling,* son of Ethelred, dated A.D. 1015. After bequeathing "to Christ and S. Peter" certain lands which he had bought of his father, he continues "and that land at Mordune which my father me to let, I give into that place for our both soules

* Consuetudines Kanciæ. A history of Gavelkind, etc., by Charles Sandys, F.S.A., London, 1851, p. 290.

and I him this pray for God's love and for St. Mary and for St. Peter's that it stand mought."

It is evident that the Etheling had some doubt as to the legality of his bequest of land, the which his father had only allowed him to enjoy ("let," originally meaning "hinder," very early obtained the significance of "allow") and it is equally certain the Abbot of Westminster, who represented St. Peter, shared his doubts; but King Ethelred II., the Unready, died in 1016, the year after his son, and troublous times ensued, small respect had the Danish invaders for Ecclesiastics, nor was it until the Confessor came to the throne that the Abbot and Convent of Westminster obtained a Charter confirming the gift of the Etheling, as Lysons informs us, quoting from Dugdale's Monasticum. Manning and Bray say further, that they obtained a Charter from William the Conqueror and later on one from Edward I.

It is not a little singular that this gift by the will of Ethelstan appears to have escaped the notice of all the Surrey historians, who invariably commence this account of Morden with the Charter granted by Edward the Confessor.

Morden is described in Domesday as follows:—

There are three carucates in the demesne & eight villeins & five cottars with four carucates, one bondman and a mill at 40 shillings. In the time of King Edward it was valued at £6, now £10, yet it is worth (produces) £15. In the time of King John Isabella de Caron had a Charter for the right of free warren in her land at Morden.

The Abbots of Westminster* held the Manor until the Dissolution, and there is an allusion to one of these clerical Lords in the interesting work of Mr. F. B. Lewis, B.A., entitled "Pedes Finium or the Feet of Fines,"† from which it appears that in the 19th of Henry III. (1235) "Matilda fil' Baldwin sued Richard Abbot of Westminster by brother Theobald his monk in Morden." The nature of the dispute is not stated, but the result was, that Matilda and Richard settled the grievance amicably, and the suit was withdrawn, doubtless much to the credit of both parties. The Abbots of Westminster lost their right of presentation to the Church, by lapse, in the latter part of the thirteenth century, but their prudent brother, in authority in 1288, "attempted an appropriation of the Church, but was not able to effect it until the year 1300. On the 21st of August, 1331, he endowed the vicarage with a house and garden, thirteen acres of arable land and one acre of meadow. The Manor reverted to the Crown at the Dissolution, but Edward the VI. granted it to Edward Whitchurch and Lionel Dutchet,* from whom it was purchased, in 1553, by Richard Garth,† son of Edward Garth, who was one of the six clerks in Chancery.

* There appears to have been a tradition that the Prior of Merton held Morden before the Dissolution, but I have not been able to find any proof thereof. Walford in his edition of Brayley is the only writer who mentions it.

Richard was known as Richard of Morden, and the Manor descended from father to son in the direct line until the year 1700, when a Richard, dying without issue, bequeathed the estate to the son of a connection by marriage, Richard Boevey,‡ who took the name of Garth. Right worthily did the successive Lords of the Manor grace their position. The Parish owes a debt of the deepest gratitude to the Garth family and their relations, for not only are all the Parish charities but two, the proof of their munificence, but the Church itself is a monument of the piety of the second Richard Garth.

This excellent gentleman was the grandson of Richard of Morden§ and in 1634, he restored the house, glebe of about fourteen and a half acres and the great Tithes to the Church, thus converting the Vicarage into a Rectory, nor did his good works stop here for in 1636 the Church was rebuilt chiefly by his liberality. He is justly commemorated on his tombstone as "Ecclesiæ Amicus"—the friend of the Church. The residence of the Garths for very many years was Morden Hall, the last of the name who occupied it being Richard Garth who died in 1787.* He had three daughters, Clara, Elizabeth and Mary, but no son, and after their marriages, respectively, Clara to Owen Putland Meyrick, Esq., of the Isle of Anglesea, Elizabeth to William Lowndes, Esq., of Brightwell, Oxfordshire, and Mary to Sir John Frederick, of Burwood Park, Surrey, he vacated the Hall and went to reside at Morden House until his death. Upon her father's decease Clara Meyrick became Lady of the Manor, and dying without a son the Manor devolved upon the second son of Elizabeth Lowndes, who, upon his succession, took the name and arms of Garth. The Manor at the present time is in the possession of Gilliat Hatfield, Esq., who resides at the Hall, which he has greatly enlarged and surrounded by a park, taking in for that purpose an old farm which bore the singular name of "Small Profits," and in which is kept the finest, perhaps the only, herd of deer to be seen in any private park within so short a distance from London. There are but two other residences with any claim to a respectable antiquity in the Parish; one, Morden House has been alluded to, the other, known as "The Lodge" has long been in the possession of the Hoare family. It was originally a farm house, but has been enlarged from time to time until it has become a commodious residence.

* They were printers. Whitchurch printed several editions of the Great or Cranmer's Bible, and Dutchet is said to have printed the Psalms of Sternhold and Hopkins, doubtless, he was the associate of Whitchurch.

* Having no son, he devised his estates to his eldest daughter Mrs. Clara Meyrick with remainder to her second son and for want of a second son to his next daughter Mrs. Lowndes and if she should not have a second son then to Lady Frederick. Mrs. Meyrick had no sons but Mrs. Lowndes had two. Manning and Bray, Hist. of Surrey Vol. II. ed. 1804-14.

The handsome house standing in extensive grounds called "Morden Park" is a comparatively modern erection having been built about 1775 by John Ewart, Esq., who, after residing there for some years, purchased Bysshe Court,* in the parish of Horne, Surrey, and went there to reside. Several gentlemen of position have occupied it since, and at the present time it is in the tenure of John Wormald, Esq.,

A melancholy interest attaches itself to Morden Lodge which was built upon the site of the Mansion occupied by the eminent financier, Abraham Goldsmith, in the early part of this century. Mr. Goldsmith was the contemporary of Rothschild and Sir Thomas Baring. He occupied the highest position in the moneyed world, but in 1809 Stock, in which he was very largely involved, fell with great rapidity, which so preyed upon his mind that he shot himself in a part of his grounds called "The Wilderness." His death caused such derangement in financial circles that Consols fell from 66½ to 63¾.

In 1804 the Vestry agreed that anyone objecting to serve the office of Overseer should pay a fine of £10. Mr. Goldsmith paid this fine shortly before his death.

None of the old residential landowners remain in in the Parish, but an aged and very respectable man named Skilton represents a labouring family which has resided in Morden for more than two hundred years.

THE CHURCH

Is dedicated to St. Lawrence, and the present edifice was rebuilt in 1636 upon the site of the former building, mainly, if not entirely, as has been said by the bounty

* Bysshe Court was built by Edward Bysshe, Councillor at Law and Bencher of Lincoln's Inn. He was a practitioner in the Court of Wards, by which he got his estate and was used to say, that he built that fine house with woodcocks' heads. Aubrey, Vol. III, p. 71, ed. 1718.

For the benefit of the uninitiated I may say the birds named are remarkable for their long bills.

of the Richard Garth of that time. It is very substantially built of brick, and tiled, and has a low embattled tower 46 ft. high. It is 80 ft. long by 22 ft. wide and consists of a nave of 50 ft. having pews on each side. Ornamental tiles in pattern occupy 32 ft. 8 in. of the floor and the remainder is paved with monumental slabs. The chancel of 30 ft. is raised 4½ in. above the level of the nave, and likewise has pews on either side. A gallery was erected in 1792 by order of the Vestry, and was for many years appropriated to the scholars of the Morden Hall Academy, the then proprietor paying £20 per annum for the privilege. In 1834 a barrel organ was placed in it, and a curious entry in one of the Registers runs thus:—"A Barrel Organ, builder Bryceson, cost £72, viz., £30 the Parishioners and £32 by the Rev. Robt. Tritton" (Rector at that period). As to where the balance of £10 came from we are not informed. This was replaced in 1843 by a very suitable and good-toned organ, the gift of Charles Hugh Hoare, Esq. The sittings number 250, including those in the gallery.

A vestry room was built by order of the Vestry on the north side of the Church in 1805, after due deliberation; for a builder was required to examine into the question of making a door in the north wall, and he, at another Vestry meeting, gave it as his opinion that "the breaking of the wall in the Church to form a door for the Vestry room would not injure the foundations of the Church." These foundations are about 8 ft. thick!

The tower contains three bells inscribed as follows:—

1. R. Garth.* 1604. W.S.
2. Gloria Deo in excelsis. 1637. B. & E.
3. Geo. Knapp. D.D. Rector. R. Philips fecit. Peter Batt. Jonah Lowgee Ch: W: 1717.

It would appear that as much of the old building as could be made available was used in the re-construction of the Church for which we may be thankful to the unknown architect. These remains consist of the plinth (or the greater part of it) on the outside of the walls, the chancel or priest's door, and that of the south porch with the stone doorways, the windows with their mullions and tracery of decorated Gothic, the eight massive tie-beams, each with its King post supporting the roof, and an arch over the east window, all of chestnut. The windows are two-light; there are four in the north wall, besides a small one pierced in the upper part near the pulpit; one light was sacrificed as respects its lower part to the exigences of the vestry room door, the upper portion alone remaining.

There is a peculiarity in the furthermost window, one of the lights has the base 20½ in. wide and is at the top but 17½ in. In the south wall are three windows and a small one to give light to the gallery.

But the east window is the glory of the Church. Well might Brayley and Britton say, "It is splendidly decorated." It is of four lights, 13 ft. 4 in. high and 10 ft. 6 in. wide; from the base to the top of the arches is 8 ft. 10 in., and the tracery measures 4 ft. 6 in. Each light is 2 ft. broad between the mullions.

The subject represented is Moses on the north and Aaron on the south side, each with a hand outstretched over the decalogue, which occupies the two central lights. The tracery exhibits two cherubs on clouds with the descending dove above them. This, however, was not the original design, which, or parts of it, were in existence, when Manning wrote (he mentions "the glass of the window was broken in some parts") and depicted the sacrifice of Abraham, and Jonah escaping from the whale. In 1828, the window was repaired and beautified as a token of the affectionate esteem of the parishioners for their Rector (the Rev. Dr. Peers); and the present subject was designed by Mrs. Mary Chambers, the wife of Lancelot Chambers, Esq., long resident in the Parish. I am informed she had the glass painted at Utrecht. Reparations were made of other parts, which are readily traced by the poorness of the colours used, but, happily, the principal figures had suffered no damage. They are above life size, and are under low, imbricated, crowned canopies, resplendent in blue and gold. Moses is bare-headed, and holds in his right hand the golden rod. Aaron is mitred and habited in the High Priest's robes, bearing the breastplate. In his left hand he holds the censer. The vestments are very beautiful, ruby and sapphire predominating in those of the former, and gold and white in Aaron's. The drawing is very good, with the usual exception of the hands and feet, the rather rugged and stern features of Moses being in perfect contrast with the calm and benignant aspect of Aaron.

The Commandments are painted in black upon yellow stain, but the canopies above them differ from those already mentioned, in that they are of the classical style, being hemispherical arcades of a circular temple. They are, however, enriched with embellishments and small crowns in blue and gold, of the same pattern as those of the noble figures on either side. At the base of the window are four panels, bordered at the top with quartrefoils and marguerites in rich colours. The panel under Moses is inscribed, "The Law was given by Moses, but grace and trueth came by Jesus Christ.." St. John i, 1.

That beneath Aaron has, "Consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession Christ Jesus." Heb. iii, 1. The two centre panels have each a figure in a highly decorated apartment, the walls of which are represented of stone, with a tiled floor in green and yellow, while in a recessed window is a seat or couch. Blue pillars with their bases and capitals of yellow support the roof. The figure on the north side is clothed in a brown vestment, and has his hands uplifted, and that on the south appears to be turning away from him, the singularity of his costume being that he has a closed helmet in the place of a head. It would seem impossible to determine what they were intended to convey. Aubrey, followed by Manning and Bray, says "they are Zacharias coming to the High Priest*, who, instead of an ephod, has his head closed with a helmet." Another opinion is that they represent the Pharisee and the Publican; and a third, the Philippian gaoler and St. Paul are intended. The subject answers to none of these suppositions. There is nothing to indicate either the High Priest, Zacharias, Pharisee, Publican, St. Paul, or Gaoler, while to suppose the High Priest in a closed helmet is too absurd. These panels have been pronounced Flemish work, and, I think, rightly. Space prevents me from pursuing the subject. I may say that there exists a tradition that this magnificent window came from Merton Abbey; which tradition, if true, I interpret to mean that some one of the Priors of Merton caused it to be made for Morden, for admittedly it belonged to the old Church. Viewed from the western end of the nave, when the sunlight is softly illuminating its beautiful colours, it is in itself a poem, bringing to mind the poet's utterance, "A thing of beauty is a joy for ever." There are three other stained windows in the Church, notably, one small one over the vestry door. It was placed there by the zeal of a good man some twenty-five years ago. Its very poverty enhances the richness of that just described. It represents the Good Shepherd and His sheep; underneath is written, "I am the Good Shepherd and know my sheep, and am known of Mine"; and although it is not a work of Art in any particular, the motive of its insertion must ever be honoured. A window in the south wall commemorates George Matthew Hoare, Esq., and his lady. In one light is Abraham with a knife in his hand, and a ram caught in thorns at his feet, and in the other is Sarah. The inscription in the base runs—"Sacred to the memory of George Matthew Hoare, died July 23, 1852, aged 73 years, and of Angelina Frances, his wife, died Jan. 25, 1846, aged 47."

* Aubrey, Vol. II, p. 140. I am quite at a loss to understand how these eminent antiquaries could have adopted such an explanation. No incident of the kind is recorded in Holy Scripture, and an ephod is not a head dress, but a kind of mantle.

The window in the north wall is to the memory of the Rev. Robert Tritton, a late Rector. One light delineates Simeon blessing the Infant Saviour, and beneath is the verse, "Then took he Him up in his arms and blessed God and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in peace: according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." The other light has St. Paul parting with his friends, the elders of the Church at Ephesus, and is inscribed, "And they all wept sore and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake that they should see his face no more." An angel is depicted in the centre of the tracery, holding a scroll upon which we read, "Blessed are the pure in heart."

The pulpit is Jacobean and was the gift, in 1719, of Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner, née Garth. It is of oak and a few years since, upon the removal of accumulated coats of varnish from the central panel, it was found to be inlaid with a border of oak cut across the grain. In each corner is a quadrant of mahogany bordered in a similar manner. From the centre of the base a wavy inlay of mahogany meets at its point a similar inlay from the top in a diamond also of mahogany. May we not cherish the thought that thus the pious architect symbolized the Pentecostal tongues of fire? On either side of these inlays are the initials of Mrs. Gardiner and the date of the erection, thus—

E . G

The sounding board is also inlaid very artistically, with a star of many rays in a small circle, which forms the nucleus of another star of six direct rays protruding beyond the circumference of a much larger circle, having between them smaller rays confined within the latter.

The Communion table is of oak and with its magnificent crimson velvet cover.* richly adorned with gold braid

* Several writers have stated that the Communion cloth is three hundred years old. Had they read the inscription on Mrs. Gardiner's monument, they would not have fallen into this error.

and fringe, was also the gift of Mrs. Gardiner in 1710. This beautiful cover had been suffered to get into dis-repair, but was renovated and restored to its pristine lustre with admirable taste, at the cost of Mrs. Winlaw, the wife of the late Rector. The rails of dark oak are in excellent keeping with the other appointments.

On either side of the east window is the Creed and the Lord's Prayer on wainscot, again testifying to Mrs. Gardiner's affection for the church of her native parish.

The font is of stone, octagonal, with quatrefoils and was the work of James Legrew, a pupil of Chantrey. It was the gift of Henry Tritton, Esq., in 1843. The old font was found broken into pieces beneath the floor of the tower some years since; attempts were made to re-construct it without success.

In 1810 "alterations and additions were made to the pews" by order of the Vestry, and, in 1826, those on the south side of the aisle (nave) were ordered to be altered "so as to correspond with the pews opposite."

The tower was thoroughly repaired in 1887, and the event is commemorated by an inscription in the basement as follows:—

Parish Charities.

On the front of the Organ gallery is written in gold letters :—

Donations to the Parish.

A.D. 1626. Henry Smith Esq.† of London £1 0 0 per annum payable from an estate at Bexill in Sussex.

1718. Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner widow by Will £300 for building and endowing a Free School in her native Parish for the children of the poor.

* These have been recently re-gilt at the cost of Mrs. Winlaw.

† Henry Smith, born at Wandsworth in 1548, was a silversmith of Cheapside, London, and became an Alderman in 1608. Having no children, he devoted his large estate chiefly to charitable uses, both during his lifetime and by Will. Amongst other benevolences he gave a sum per annum to every parish in Surrey for the benefit of the poor, excepting from his gift three small and obscure places, viz., Tattesfield, Chilworth and Wanborough. Mr. Smith died January the 3rd, 1627-8, and was buried in his native Parish. He was known as Dog Smith from being always accompanied by his dog. John Evelyn, the Diarist, thus alludes to him in a letter to Gibson, Bishop of London. I regret that John Aubrey[1] gave currency to a ridiculous story of Mr. Smith having been whipped out of the parish of Mitcham as a vagrant, and that in consequence he left money to every parish in Surrey except that one, the fact being that Mitcham had originally £4 per annum allotted to it. He was buried at Wandsworth and has a handsome monument to his memory.

1827. Mrs. Clara Meyrick Widow and Lady of the Manor £228. 18. 0. Old South Sea Annuities the interest to be distributed annually at Christmas in Blankets.*

* Since this record Mrs. Eliz : Andrews-Adams left in 1858 £43. 14. 2 3 per cent. Consols, " the interest to be applied for the comfort & benefit of poor aged widows.

Over the Chancel door is written in a painted frame :—MINE HOUSE SHALL BE CALLED THE HOUSE OF PRAYER FOR ALL PEOPLE. isa. 56, 7. And upon the door leading to the Tower :—REMEMBER THE WORDS OF THE LORD JESUS, HOW HE SAID IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE. Acts xx, 35. And "therefore be merciful according to thy power." There was formerly an alms box on this door.

On the South Wall, framed, is the Royal Shield of Queen Anne, with the motto :—SEMPER EADEM. Above is painted on the wall :—FEAR GOD AND HONOUR THE QUEEN. This is a restoration of the original inscription, traces of which are still to be seen. I was informed a few years since by the oldest inhabitant of the Parish, who also was Churchwarden at the time of his decease, that he remembered a very ungallant inscription upon the base of this coat of arms to this effect :—"Women are not to talk in the Church." Successive coats of varnish have obliterated it.

children his second son Thomas died at 31 years old assistant Solicitor to the Treasury his eldest son Peter Leheup Esqr who has likewise a monument erected here died before him at the age of 50 years as also his daughter Elizabeth the wife of Lewis Charles Montolieu of Albermarle St. Esq. by whom he had several children and Mary his only child surviving wife of Richard Garth Esqr Lord of this Manor by whom she had three daughters. He died the 14 of May 1777 at his house in Albermarle St. in the parish of St. George Hanover Square aged 77 years.

On the South Wall, commencing from near the East Window.

On a large monument of white marble upon a black slab, surmounted by an urn. A floral decoration upon the slab has partly disappeared. There is a medallion at the base.

36. Sacred to the memory of Clara daughter of William Lowndes late of Winslow in the County of Bucks Esqr and wife of Peter Leheup of the parish of St George Hanover Square Esqr. She dyed the 30th day of November 1773, aged 79 years leaving issue one son Peter Leheup and two daughters. Elizabeth late wife of Charles Lewis Montolieu of the same parish Esqr by whom she left to survive her two sons and four daughters. The other Mary mother of three daughters and wife of Richard Garth Esqr Lord of this Manor of Mordon in Surry. Also to the memory of her said son Peter Leheup junior late of Ashwell in the County of Hertford Esqr who from a gratefull sense of her most affectionate constant maternal love and concern for his welfare had ordered this monument to be erected for transmitting to posterity her piety to God and studious care of her offspring together with her many other private and domestick virtues but such is the uncertainty of life that the father by the premature death of his son survives to finish what the son had only time to begin. He dyed on the first day of March 1774 aged 50 years in a well grounded hope of future happiness in reward for a religious well spent life and what was mortal of both mother and son lies interred in this church in the same grave. He marryed Sarah daughter of Benjamin Lihook Esqr leaving her to inherit grief for her loss who from tender affection and the highest esteem desires to bear her mournfull testimony of his many excellent virtues. He was distinguished in private life by an uncommon benevolence of heart that led him for many years to divide his income with the poor in private and public charities and was possessed of all those social and amiable virtues truly Christian that flow from conscious principles of moral rectitude. Dying without issue he left the bulk of his fortune to descend to his father's family without the vain ambition of perpetuating an empty name.

OVER THE DOOR OF THE CHANCEL.

On a white marble tablet on black, having a small shield upon which are emblazoned the Garth arms in their proper tinctures.

37. Sacred to the Memory of the Revd Richard Garth* of Farnham Surrey Lord of this manor who died January 30th 1862 aged 71. Also of Mary his wife who died May 17th 1849 aged 52. Also of Mary Jane Garth their eldest daughter who died Dec. 29th 1855 aged 34. Also of the Rev. Henry Garth their second son who died Sep. 29th 1859 aged 35.

Next to this, on the wall is a very beautiful monument both in design and execution. It consists of an open pediment, supported by two fluted Corinthian columns, and having a small vase on each side. In the opening is a shield bearing a lozenge emblazoned of six quarters. Between the columns is a white marble slab carved to represent a pall, festooned and held in position by three escallop shells, the fringe was formerly gilded; a skull at the base is partly concealed by its folds. The inscription is cut over the creases of the pall. A cherub's head below completes the work.

41. Here lyes the body of George Garth who died ye 30th day of November in the fifty third year of his age in the yeare of of our Lord 1676.

42. To the memory of Mary the much lamented wife of Richard Garth Esq. who died the 19th of January 1780 aged 47 years. A woman of exemplary piety whose study it was to be good herself and to do good to others her greatest pleasure. She endured her pain and sickness which were extremely severe with the resignation and patience of a Christian and entertained the thought of her approaching change with the cheerfulness of one who firmly depended on the Divine mercy through the merits of a Redeemer for a glorious reward.

43. Here lyeth the body of Richard Garth Esq.* who dyed the 18th day of July 1700 in the 49th year of his age.

There are twelve Hatchments† in the Church. Six on the North Wall and the same number on the South. They are taken in order, commencing with the one nearest to the East window.

* This gentleman was the son of George Garth (No. 41). He married Catherine — and died s.p. In his will dated 15th May, 1697, proved in P.C.C. 1st August, 1700 (Noel, fo. 114), he states that he had no children by his wife, Catherine, and he bequeaths all his estates in default of issue to the use and behoof of Richard Boevey, son of Elizabeth Boevey, wife of John Boevey, late of Mincing Lane, London, merchant, etc., "soe that he take upon him, calls, and writes himselfe, by the sirname of Garth always after any part of my estate shall come to him in possession by virtue of this my will." The abovenamed John Boevey married Elizabeth, a daughter of Sir Humphrey Bennett, and Richard Garth married for his second wife Jane, her sister, hence the connection.—Communicated by R. Garraway Rice, Esq., F.S.A.

† The proper assignment of the Armorial bearings upon Hatchments is confessedly a difficult task, arising sometimes from the fact that several families bear the same arms, and sometimes from the errors of the heraldic painters. Both these causes operate in the Morden achievements. I have, therefore, given he coats as they were painted, and where doubt exists have left the name blank.

THE REGISTERS.

The Registers of the Parish of Mordon are in four volumes.

Volume I. commences in 1634, and contains Marriages, to 1753, and Baptisms and Burials to 1809. It is of vellum 14 inches by 6 inches, and is now loose in a parchment cover, which has a flap to it 2¾ inches wide, having a loop and the remains of a piece of leather through it, used to tie round the book. There are ninety-five folios, and at one end four folios of very strong paper have been affixed, on the first page

[1] Manning says "the same," but if Richard of Morden died in 1573, it must have been Robert, his son, who nominated Richard Dyer. See note to No. 11 of Brasses.
[2] Resigned, 1634.
[3] Died 21st February, 1670.
[4] Died 19th September, 1682.
[5] Died 5th October, 1704.
[6] Was Vicar of Headly and Archdeacon; he died 1734.
[7] Died, 1744.
[8] Died, 8th January, 1778.
[9] Was also Vicar of Ickleford-cum-Pirton, in Herts. Died April 29th, 1835.
[10] Died, November 27th, 1877.
[11] Resigned, August, 1899.

of which is written, "Memorandum Gathered in Mordon Church for ye Brief of church Minshull ye summ of." No date and no sum are mentioned. Underneath this is "Morden Register Surry, J.S." with many flourishes. At the other end are five folios of the same kind of paper, on the second page is written, "A Register of all such births in ye Parish of Mordon from ye 1st day of May 1695 where ye persons born were not afterwards Baptized." No entries whatever have been made to the above effect, but below in another handwriting is, "A Register of the Marriages Baptisms and Burials in the Parish of Moredon in the County of Surrey." All the remaining folios at either end are blank. The volume is in admirable condition. The writing is always legible, generally good, and much of it in a very superior style, but it has been treated in an extraordinary fashion. After the demise of the third Rector, it was several times turned end for end, presumably by the Parish Clerks. Notes on these vagaries will be found in their appropriate places. At other times the entries are not consecutive, which would imply that they were made from memory or from memoranda.

Volume II. is the Register of Marriages from 1754 to 1789. Is also of vellum, strongly bound in parchment, with two clasps, one broken. It is 12½ inches by 8 inches and has eighteen folios. One folio is taken up by a printed title and forms of entry, four and a half folios by entries of banns at one end and twelve and a half by the marriages at the other. Outside is written—"Banns of Marriage and Marriages 1754—1790." It is in excellent order.

Volume III. contains Marriages from 1790 to 1812 inclusive. It is made of strong paper, ruled and printed for three marriage entries on each page. It measures 14½ inches by 9½ inches, and is well bound in parchment. On the outside is written 1790—1812, and printed in gold letters "Marriage Register book of the Parish of Mordon Surry." Inside the cover is written—"Sunday January 10th 1790. The Rev. Dr Peers, Rector. Mr Richard Mills Churchwarden. John Stanley, Clerk." It has forty-five folios—fifteen and a half of which are used for entries of Marriages and the rest are blank. At each end some leaves of unruled paper have been inserted containing Banns of Marriage. It is well preserved.

Volume IV. contains Baptisms and Burials only, from 1810 to 1812. It is of vellum, 12 inches by 7½ inches, bound in rough calf, with two clasps, both broken. On the outside is a red morocco label, 4½ inches by 3 inches, with a gilt border, and is inscribed "John Hammond, James W. Atkinson, Churchwardens. Mordon Surry 1809." Eight pages are taken up at one end with Baptisms, and four at the other with Burials. This also has been carefully kept, and some of the spare leaves have been used for memoranda respecting the Parish Charities, together with an inventory of the goods belonging to the Church made about 1870.

* "Lues" is evidently intended for "Lewis." BERRY'S Pedigrees of Surrey says "Lewis Scawen was the son of Sir Thomas Scawen, Alderman of London, and married Mary, daughter of Abraham Foster of High Laver, co. Essex. Sir Thomas and Sir William his brother lived at Carshalton, an adjoining parish. Sir William was M.P. for Surrey and died s.p. The family in the direct male line ended by the marriage of Tryphena Scawen to Henry, Earl Bathurst, as his second wife in 1739; the Earl died in 1794. She survived until 1807."

Sir Wm. Scawen was one of a long line of gentlemen who by their beneficence have rendered the City of London illustrious. He had a friend named Moreton, who fell into difficulties, and Sir William sent to him the following generous epistle:—

"Sir,—I have heard of the casualty which has involved you in extreme distress at this time and, knowing you to be a man of great good nature, industry and probity, have resolved to stand by you. Be of good cheer; the bearer brings with him five thousand pounds and has my order to answer your drawing as much more on my account. I did this in haste for fear I should come too late for your relief, but you may value yourself with me to the sum of fifty thousand pounds, for I can very cheerfully run the hazard of being so much the less rich than I am now, to save an honest man whom I love.

Your friend and servant,
W.S."

* These entries are on a part of the page upon which some for 1784 were entered, and the Register has been turned upside down to receive some for 1808, which are inserted in their proper place.

† These entries are found nearly in the centre of the Register, between those for 1809. After the year 1726 Mr. Knapp, the Rector, does not appear to have written the Register himself, and the Clerk, it is presumed, separated the burials from the other entries and placed them as indicated, a practice which was not followed after Mr. Knapp's death in 1734. They are very curious and very incorrect.

Aprill y^e	12, 1734.	A Gentle Man was buried from the Duke of Cleavelands.*

The last entry of Marriage in this Register is in 1751. There are no entries for 1752 or 1753, the next Register commencing 1754.

* There was no Duke of Cleaveland in 1734, and the mistake of the clerk possibly arose in this way. Charles II created Barbara, wife of Roger Palmer, Duchess of Cleaveland, and gave Henry, his second son by her, the title of Duke of Grafton. This son died in 1690, and left a son, Charles, who succeeded to the title. In the meantime Charles II had presented the Duchess with Nonsuch Palace and park, containing a large mansion called Worcester House, which was but a short distance from Morden—a little more than three miles. The Duchess of Cleaveland died in 1709, and left to her grandson, Charles, the second Duke of Grafton, the park and what remained of the palace and Worcester House, much of which she had pulled down. Thus it is very reasonable to suppose the Duke of Grafton, as the grandson of the Duchess of Cleaveland, would be popularly known as the Duke of Cleaveland.
